How would you describe your overall internship experience during your final year of faculty?

My internship at Accelsiors was an excellent experience for a graduate, as it gradually introduced me to the world of clinical research. It helped me adapt to my goals after graduation and gave me a clearer sense of direction for my future.

Everyone I interacted with during the internship was thoughtful and understanding of my position as an intern. They adjusted tasks to my experience level and made my transition into the professional world much easier.

What were your main responsibilities during your internship, and how did they align with your expectations?

I was given a wide range of responsibilities, which helped me gain a comprehensive understanding of how a CRO company operates. This allowed me to better identify where I fit in and what I want to pursue in the future.

How did the internship help you develop new skills, both professionally and personally?

Since this was my first experience working with a company, everything had a significant impact on me, both professionally and personally. It helped me develop a clearer perspective on my goals and what I want to achieve in my career.

How did you manage the demands of your internship while keeping up with your final-year studies?

Balancing the internship and final-year studies required a different kind of commitment than what I was used to at university. After completing my academic responsibilities, I found that I could easily dedicate my remaining time to the internship. The tasks were different from my usual work, which kept things fresh and engaging, leaving me energized rather than drained.

What advice would you give to current students who are about to start their internship or who are looking for one?

Every experience contributes to your personal and professional growth, so don't view your work as something difficult. Instead, try to find meaning in the tasks you're given and learn something from each new experience.

If you could go back and change one thing about your internship experience, what would it be?

I would definitely make more of an effort to communicate with colleagues from other departments. It would have been a great opportunity to learn more about their perspectives and understand the broader scope of Accelsiors' work.
